THE SAN FRANCISCO BOARD OF HEALTH
URGES THE USE OF THE

Royal Baking Powder.

The magnificent tribute of the San Francisco Board of Health to the great purity and wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder greatly disturbs the manufacturers of the lower grade powders. Their envious publications, however, cannot break the force of this unsolicited and unbiased high medical endorsement. Attached is a certified copy of their original report, with the signatures of the members of the Board in fac-simile:

We, the members of The Board of Health of the City and County of San Francisco, cordially approve and recommend the Royal Baking Powder. It is absolutely pure and healthful, composed of the best ingredients of the highest strength and character.

In our judgment it is impossible to make a purer or stronger Baking Powder than the "Royal."

A Tree That Produces Rain.

The people of Stillwater are greatly mystified over a remarkable natural phenomenon which exists near that town. In the field of Robert Copper, south of that place, stands a large cottonwood tree, with its branches leaning out over the bed of a little creek. A few weeks ago a party of picnickers stopped under the tree and were startled by finding that there was a continual shower of water falling from its leaves and branches. It is in the shape of a fine mist or drizzle, but can be plainly felt and seen at all times. Although it had not rained in that part of the territory for weeks, the fall of water from that tree has kept up continually, and crowds of people come from a distance every day to view the wonderful curiosity.

Those scientifically inclined speculate, theorize and give it up; the superstitious ones shake their heads ominously, but the tree keeps right on sending down its shower, and whenever the sun is shining, a beautiful rainbow can be seen under its branches.—Oklahoma Cor. Kansas City Journal.

Frightened by a Snake.

Five-year-old Hazel Fellows, daughter of a well known Jackson (Mich.) citizen, has been almost frightened to death by a rattlesnake. Little Hazel was out in the yard singing and her music charmed the snake, which was near by, and which held its head up as long as she sang. The girl saw the snake, but did not know what it was, afterward describing it as "something very pretty and tied up with ribbons." When she stopped singing the snake put out its fangs, and Hazel, being fearfully frightened, screamed. The women in the house rushed out and found her. Her face was colorless and her limbs rigid. She was soon restored to consciousness, when she said that the animal sprang toward her, striking her in the waist the moment she stopped singing. An examination showed a red spot at her waist, but the flesh was not broken, evidently on account of her thick clothes. When asked if she could hear any rattling sound she said she did, and answers to other questions made it certain that the animal was a rattlesnake.—Jackson Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Jade Head in an Ancient Grave.

In an ancient grave at Gignac (Herault), M. de Lepouge has found a finely carved human head of jade, representing a type of the great yellow skinned race or races. It is religious in character, and is evidently from China or Japan. M. Sindho regards it as a Japanese work made from a Hindu or Singhalese model of Buddha, a little before the Christian era, while M. de Millone considers it a head of Konan Yin, a Chinese deity, and M. de Rosny thinks it a head of Mayadevi, mother of Gustama, the founder of Buddhism. It is supposed to have been worn as an amulet around the neck of a Hunnic or Gothic chief. The graves at Gignac are probably those of a settlement of the West Goths.—London Globe.

The official reports show that no baking powder received an award over the Royal at the Chicago World's Fair.

The judge of awards on baking powder, Dr. H. W. Wiley, writes that the claim of another company to having received the highest award is false; that no such award was given to it.

The Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest baking powder made, and has received the highest award at every fair, wherever exhibited in competition with others.

I used Ely's Cream Balm for eczema and have received great benefit. I believe it a safe and certain cure. Very pleasant to take.—Wm. Fraser, Rochester, N.Y.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Opens and cleanses the nasal passages, relieves the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once.
A particle is applied into each nostril and is absorbable. Price 25 cents, at Druggists, or by mail, ELY BROTHERS, 24 Warren Street, New York.

TRAPPING AN AUDIENCE.

How an Eccentric Lecturer Got His Men and Then Fought Them.
Some years ago an eccentric genius, the Rev. Thomas P. Hunt, used to give temperance lectures. One night he announced that he would lecture at a certain Pennsylvania town. Now, temperance was not in favor among the male portion of that burg.

The women, however, were all for the "pledge," and consequently on Hunt's first visit not a man showed himself. The benches were pretty well filled with women, though, and Hunt commenced. But instead of temperance he took them to task about the vanities of dress, etc. They were great stuffed feather sleeves then. They—the sleeves—caught it, then the tight lacing, and so on through the whole catalogue of female follies, but no word about temperance.

The ladies went home, nearly mad, told their husbands about it and voted old Hunt a regular humbug. He announced he would lecture at the same place the next night. Long before the time appointed the people began to arrive, and when Hunt hobbled down the aisle the building was completely filled with men. The old fellow looked about, chuckled and said in a low voice, "Hogs, I've got you now!"

The audience stared.
"Aha, hogs, I've got you now!" he repeated.

After the crowd had got quiet a little the lecturer said:
"Friends, you wanted to know what I meant by saying, 'Hogs, I've got you now!' and I'll tell you. Out west the hogs run wild, and when folks get out of meat they catch a young pig, put a strap under his body and hitch him to a young sapling that will just swing him from the ground nicely. Of course he squeals and raises a rumpus, when all the old hogs gather around to see what is the matter, and then they shoot them at their leisure. Last night I hung a pig up. I hurt it a little, and it squealed. The old hogs have turned out tonight to see the fun, and I'll roast you."

And so he did, pitching into their favorite vice with much evident relish and gusto.—American Home Life.

Talmage Was Thankful.

The following is told by Boniface De Witt of the Riggs House:
"Dr. Talmage was preaching at Belleville, N. J., some years ago, and one week he made up his mind to go into the pulpit the next Sunday without notes or memoranda of what he was going to say. He memorized his sermon and believed he had it completely at his tongue's end. So Sunday night he went to the church pretty well fortified with confidence.

"In those days in that section of Jersey churches and hotels and many private residences were equipped with private gas machines, and the church where Talmage was to hold forth had one too. When he got into the pulpit after conducting the preliminary services all right, he gave out his text. Then he was horrified to find that he couldn't think of a thing to say. He repeated the text a second time, and yet his ideas failed to come. He was in agony and began slowly and impressively to announce his text a third time. As he reached the last word and the perspiration of dread and shame was beginning to start, the gas went out and plunged the place into utter darkness. There was no other means for lighting the edifice, and when it was announced that the gas machine had broken down hopelessly Dr. Talmage pronounced the benediction, and I have heard him say that he never did so before or since with greater fervor or thankfulness of spirit."—Washington Post.

Certain Analogies.

Molting has its analogy throughout the animal kingdom. We indeed molt invisibly, are continuously shedding our scales, but there are some animals that get through this process even more quickly than do birds—as, for instance, the newt, eel and snake.

Some pages have noted that some people have a few extra long hairs growing out from the general mass of the eyebrows. The few long hairs are representatives of a permanent condition in the chimpanzee and some baboons. They grow out separately from the general hairy mass over the superciliary ridges.

Darwin notes as a significant fact that the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet of man are quite naked of hairs, like the inferior surfaces of all four extremities in most of the lower animals. Something about the ear: The lobule of the ear is peculiar to man. There is, however, a rudiment of it in the gorilla. Happy gorilla—and that the gas machine who have belief in treatment are the more easily cured; those who have not set up a resistance to the progress of cure.

The earth doesn't owe any man a living, but it will do its part if he will do his.

What Antonio Found in the Coal.

It was a queer find, that of Antonio Hagenlocker, and none can blame him for being surprised. Antonio is an engineer in the employ of the Ansonia Brass and Copper company, and as he placed an extra large lump of soft coal under the boiler he had no thoughts of what the lump of coal contained. A few minutes later he opened the furnace door again, and what was his surprise to see in the furnace a handsome plant resembling a species of cactus! It was bright red from the heat, every vein in the leaves being defined. He carefully removed it from the furnace without breaking, and when it cooled it turned to a dull gray color.

It rests on a base of coal and then stands out a well defined petrifaction, but not carbonized, so that it burned as readily as did the coal surrounding it. He showed the formation to many, and nothing like it has ever been seen here. The stalk of the plant was cut from the parent stem is well defined. Mr. Hagenlocker is to have it mounted and placed under a glass case.—Waterbury (Conn.) American.

Why the Soldier Ran.

"When Sherman was marching through Georgia, myself and a companion went on a little foraging expedition," said O. F. Rudiker. "We had a long weary tramp without finding anything to replenish the larder, for the country had been scoured by foraging parties several times before. We finally sighted a cabin inhabited by an Irish woman. In a high board enclosure were a dozen fat geese. We arranged it that I should engage the woman in conversation while my companion appropriated a goose. He fastened a long line thread to his bayonet, attached a well baited fishhook and began angling in the goose pen. Suddenly there was a loud squawking, and we saw a big fat gander flutter to the top of the pen and make toward the soldier, who was beating a retreat. The woman was greatly amused, and called out, 'Och, me darlint, don't run; shure the gawdier's only playin wid yez. 'Playin nothin!' called back the fleeing soldier, the blamed thing means business, and the bluecoat disappeared with the squawking gander in hot pursuit."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Cow Inside of a Log.

Owen Glancy, of Summit, missed a very valuable cow last week and spent several days looking for her without finding any trace of her whereabouts, and had about concluded that she had been stolen when one of his children discovered the animal not over fifty yards from the house. She had wandered into a hollow cedar log, presumably to get into the shade, and in pushing her way for fifty feet into the log she passed through a place where it had splintered in falling, with the splinters headed in the direction she was going.

Of course when she attempted to back out her exit was effectively blocked, the splinters having sprung back. And there she was, as securely confined as any prisoner in the penitentiary. When discovered there she had been imprisoned for five days.

Mr. Glancy had to cut the log in front of her before she could be taken out, nothing the worse for her experience except for her enforced fast. The cow weighs about 1,500 pounds, so the size of the cedar timber in that "neck of the woods" can be imagined.—Elmira (N. Y.) Chronicle.

Money in Chili.

Money in Chili is so scarce just now that pasteboard notes of hand are used instead of coin. Merchants state their name and a certain sum on a scrap of pasteboard, which circulates as money till at last redeemed by its original producer.—London Tit-Bits.

FAITH CURISTS.

These very "confident" people are strangely self-satisfied until danger to life looms up, as we in the chronic pains of many years endurance attack the heart, like rheumatism very often does, then they turn to a better faith. This better faith, held by many thousands, is simple and certain. It is faith founded on experience that St. Jacob's oil will cure, because it has cured all these painful ailments permanently. It is a faith founded on reason. We know what can be done by what has been done a thousand times. Every physician knows that those who have belief in treatment are the more easily cured; those who have not set up a resistance to the progress of cure.

TRAVELING RISKS.

With the increased facilities for travel and the great number of travelers, there has been naturally a great increase in the risk of accidents.

Everyone, who for any reason is compelled to incur these risks, should keep by him a supply of ALCOCK'S POISON PLASTERS, for they are a wonderful specific in strains of the back or limbs, such as are almost inevitable in case of accident.

Any one starting on a long journey should have one as a part of his equipment. Commuters on suburban trains should keep them both at home and in the office. ALCOCK'S POISON PLASTERS have repeatedly proved their great value in time of need.

HAUNTED.

A haunted house is something of a rarity, but an individual haunted with the idea that his ailments are incurable is a person of no rarity. With Diaboli in the ability of medicine to cure is only a mild form of monomania, although in some cases repeated failures to obtain relief from many different sources would almost justify the idea. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has demonstrated its ability to overcome dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney trouble, material complaints and nervousness, and its recorded achievements in the curative line ought at least to warrant its trial by any one troubled with either of the above ailments, even although his previous efforts to obtain remedial aid have been fruitless. Used with persistence, the Bitters will conquer the most obstinate cases.

It is always hard to associate quarrels and unpleasantness with a house that has vines growing over its doors and windows.
